Paul's Sermon at Athens

Acts 17

The people in Greece believed in lots and lots of different gods. Paul found a statue there that said it was for an unknown god. He went to a place where Greeks gathered to talk. "I see you are all very religious people," he began.

The people listened, curious to know more.

"You even worship an unknown god. But I know who that god is. That is THE God. The God I worship. The one and only God who made everything that is."

Some people nodded.

"That God sent a man named Jesus to bring us closer to God. I want to tell you all about him!"

Jesus taught the people about Jesus and some of them believed. Paul just loved to share the good news wherever he went!

PICTURE IT

Here is a picture of the "Acropolis." It is a building that Paul would have seen in Athens. Color it up and draw birds in the sky above.

TICTACTOE

Nice Quote!

Our worship of the One, True God finds a home in the many ways we can express ourselves to that God.
